« "One ton of coal has the potential to produce 2.2 BOE of liquid petroleum. The United States has the largest known coal reserves in the world with 237 billion tons, which equates to 522 billion BOE, or twice the known petroleum reserves of Saudi Arabia. If a national policy to use coal and natural gas for the production of liquid petroleum by use of synthetic processes could be established, the United States could once again lead the world in petroleum resource potential based on the immense supply of coal and natural gas reserves. The United States has the potential to have a 286 year supply of synthetic petroleum from coal at a production rate of 5-million BOE/D."—DRS jr »
